Supporting evidence-based decision making

The public release of COMSIS by the Department supports evidence- based decision making by community services sector organisations. Data in COMSIS can be used in conjunction with other data and local knowledge to build an evidence base. A strong evidence base is needed for planning effective community services as it helps to identify, prioritise and address unmet needs, to target disadvantaged individuals, families and communities.

What is available in COMSIS?

COMSIS provides a single comprehensive source of local, regional and statewide information with over 200 datasets.

Data topics available in COMSIS include demography, education, employment, family, housing, income, remoteness and disadvantage.

The data collections are supplied by the Australian Bureau of Statistics and are focused on the identification of social disadvantage across Queensland.

COMSIS is a dynamic database and will be updated as additional or more recent data becomes available, ensuring it remains a current, comprehensive and significant tool for government and the Non-profit Community Services Sector.

Regional profiles

COMSIS also provides statewide and regional summaries for each of the seven Department of Communities' regions.

Regional profiles include a combination of maps, graphs, tables and key findings on selected data topics.

Geographic areas/locations

COMSIS enables you to query topics of interest for various geographic areas including Queensland, the Department of Communities' regions, Local Government Areas and Statistical Areas (SA2).
