The indoor pool

Figure 6.22: An aerial photograph showing the Vibe Hotel site, the proposed location of the hotel building and the hotel car park, the existing indoor heated pool that survived the fires, and some important large remnant trees.187

Figure 6.24: The same location – 19/2/2015, some 20 months later. Clearly there is no reason why the pool could not have been retained and incorporated as a community facility as a part of the Vibe Hotel complex. Note too, all the missing trees.

Yarloop - Collaboration with place based community centres

Gippsland - Asset Based Community Development Model for Recovery

East Coast Tasmania - Independent partnership broker and jointly vertically agreed criteria for recovery projects

Canterbury - Funding, collaboration, innovation
Our case studies align with broader research finding (routine times) that critical to government support of citizen-led initiatives:

‘If support includes an active and open attitude or strategy toward citizen self-organisation, ranging from facilitation to cooperation, positive effects are reported.’

What does the ‘government’ believe about the ability and the risks of the community being a part of the decision making? …of the action? ..in regard to what?

How does government work with community after disaster to build resilience?
